SALOU

SALOU

Salou is a town located on the Mediterranean coast of Spain, near Barcelona. Almost one century later, or starting in the sixties, Salou became a leading reference in Europe as a tourist and holiday destination. Its golden sand beaches and coves, the calm waters and temperate climate are its greatest attractions, which are complemented with internationally renowned sport and leisure possibilities.

The unbeatable weather has positioned Salou as a sport destination, and many professional teams and athletes come here to train, for football, cycling, track and field, golf, water sports, and many others. Furthermore, in 2013 Salou was awarded Sport Tourism Destination for football.

Salou enjoys a Mediterranean climate, temperate and hot, with a tourist season that extends throughout the year. Summers are hot, yet cooled by sea breezes, and spring's fair weather lingers on well into autumn. Winters are typical of the Mediterranean climate, with extremely mild temperatures.
